

Peter McLaughlin

Formerly resided in Tsawwassen, B.C, he participated in carving classes for 2 years, carving birds, ducks, and horses, pictorial style.

In 1970-1972 he constructed a log cabin in Whistler, B.C., a 4 x 4 access only, and felled the trees, peeled the logs, and hauled them to the location for use. It was a very steep slope, and he made use of a winch and the help of many volunteers! The cabin is still in good condition, and used regularly.

After retiring from his career in 1994, he had a Home Renovation and Construction company, until 2017. He has always had a great love of wood, using and shaping it in projects of many kinds and purposes, using the natural flow of the wood and evolving it.

He loves working with natural native species of wood: birch, cedar, pine, etc. He used a driftwood fir log for his potlatch bowl, which, along with a First Nations style “Moon Mask” won two Blue Ribbons in the Peachland 100th Fall Fair.
